The Risk Self-Assessment Tool: What's In It for You?

Presented

Wednesday, April 4, 2012 | 2:00 p.m. (EST)

From hotels to sports arenas, theme parks, and racetracks, the Commercial Facilities Sector is extremely diverse. The Risk Self-Assessment Tool (RSAT) is a free, easy-to-use Web-based tool created by the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), in partnership with the private sector, to deliver an all-hazards threat analysis for commercial facility owners and operators.

To help better understand how completing a risk self-assessment can increase the security profile and resilience of your facility, DHS will present a 60-minute Webinar, The Risk Self-Assessment Tool: What's In It for You?, to explain the tool, how to use it, and how your facility can benefit from the analysis.

The RSAT Webinar will feature Federal and private sector experts, including private sector facility owners and operators who have already used the tool. Presenters will explain how to use the tool and how their facilities have benefited from using it.

When combined with a facility's specific characteristics (i.e., usage, size, capacity), the DHS threat analysis and consequence estimate helps owners and operators identify and prioritize where security measures, procedures, or staff training might be needed—thereby helping managers put their security resources to better use.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

From the private sector: Security and Operations Managers at hotels, convention centers, racetracks, stadiums, arenas, performing arts centers, theme parks, and amusement parks. From government: Fusion Center staff, State Homeland Security Advisors, and Protective Security Advisors.
