

Contents

Spring 2008 | VOL/2 | NO/2

16 | Beating the Heat

As temperatures rise, venues must find ways to keep their attendees cool during outdoor events. By Brittany Glenn

20 | Helping Hands

What every venue manager must know about dealing with volunteers. By Logan Kugler

26 | Star Treatment

Big-name guests in your venue can lead to big-time security headaches — and risks for attendees and VIPs alike. By Mark Henricks

PERSPECTIVE

32 | Caution: Creativity Ahead
Special events can be profitable — and perilous, if you're not prepared. By Julia Rutherford Silvers

36 | Taking Charge of Terror
Training and preparation were key during February's deadly shootings at NIU. By John Gordon

34 | What Happened in Vegas
A potentially deadly mishap proves that you can't be too prepared. By A.J. Slaggert

IN EVERY ISSUE

04 | Command Center
From Afterthought to Forethought

06 | This Way In
>> Homeland Security to Dole Out Grant Money >> Learn How to ID Likely Aggressors >> Patrolling the Super Bowl, Two-Wheel Style >> Mark Your Calendars

08 | Product Focus
Access Center
A look at the latest gadgets and technologies that let the people who need access have it — while keeping everyone else out.

10 | Infrastructure
Sounding an Alarm
Text messaging is the newest way to communicate crucial information, but PA systems remain viable.

12 | Risk Management
The Act of Protection
The Safety Act can limit your facility's liability for an act of terrorism at your facility.

14 | Retail and Concessions
Electronic Payment Solutions
What the top facilities around the country are using — and how those systems can work for you.

38 | Lessons Learned
Covering All the Bases
Minnesota Twins director of stadium operations Dave Horsman on the Minneapolis bridge collapse.

